

KILLED JUMPING OUT OF CAR

Chicago Woman Is Fatally Hurt When Car Skids Into Truck

Due to the icy pavements Wednesday, a fatal accident occurred at Wolf road and route 7 north of Mokena in which a woman was fatally injured.

The woman who lost her life was Mrs. Frances Soboski, 35 years old, of 10101 Commercial Ave. She was driving to Joliet with her husband, Conrad, to visit his sister.

Their car skidded in Wolf road at route 7, and slid toward two trucks that had gone into the ditch. Mrs. Soboski had opened the car door and had one foot on the running board preparing to jump when the auto struck one of the trucks. The car door was smashed, cutting off her right leg at the knee and crushing her chest. She fell into the road as the door swung open again.

A farmer who was passing took Mrs. Soboski and her husband to the office of Dr. Samuel S. Leavitt in Orland Park and then to the Little Company of Mary hospital in Evergreen Park, where she died.

Soboski, is employed at the International Harvester works in West Pullman. He has two children.

WABASH MAY CLOSE SUBWAY AT ORLAND

Oak street in Orland Park connecting the east side of the village with the west end is in danger of being closed as a result of the Wabash railroad issuing a notice the past week that it has filed a petition with the Illinois Commerce Commission for authority to do away with the subway used by the street in question. If this petition is granted it will mean a great inconvenience to the residents of the east side of Orland. The Wabash railroad is partly elevated thru the village and in order to cross the tracks on a level, the crossing south of the village will have to be used or else the 143rd street crossing which would mean a long round about way.

The subway in question has been used for street purposes for more than 25 years and is in danger of being closed as a result of the railroad can legally close a public thoroughfare. The action of the railroad follows an effort of the village board made a year ago to have the railroad replace the present wooden subway bridge with a new modern bridge and also to assist in straightening out Oak street. The matter has hung fire for sometime and last week the village officials were served with a notice from the Wabash relative to their intentions to close up the subway. The following notice relative to this matter has been posted in the Wabash depot in Orland Park:

"Notice is hereby given by the filing by the undersigned with the Illinois Commerce Commission of an application praying for authority to abrogate crossing at the intersection of Wabash rail road tracks at Oak Street in the Village of Orland Park, Cook County, Illinois.

Information as to the time and place of hearing upon this application may be secured by communication with the secretary of the Illinois Commerce Commission, Springfield, Illinois.

Norman B. Pitcairn, Frank Nicodemus, Jr., Receivers for Wabash Railroad Company."

FRANKFORT HIRED MAN KILLED ON J TRACKS

Conrad Heisner and Gilbert Schmuhl of Frankfort section men on the E. J. & E. railroad found the mangled body of Raymond Mulcay, 45 years old, lying on the main line half a mile west of the Frankfort depot. The body was badly cut up and parts of it were frozen to the rails. It is that the man was hit by a train some time Sunday night. The body was found at 7:40 o'clock Monday morning.

Mulcay had worked on the farm of Albert Jarchow near Frankfort since December 10th. Mr. Jarchow got the man thru an employment agency. The man was not given to talking much about himself so no one seemed to know whether he has relatives. He had been staying in Joliet off and on and when there roomed in the O. K. hotel.

The body was taken to the Haley undertaking rooms on South Chicago street in Joliet.

Dr. Lonsus B. Brannon, Will Co., coroner has set no date for the inquest.

Farmers Rapidly Protecting Stock and Poultry

Farmers around Mokena, Frankfort, Tinley and New Lenox are rapidly signing up for the Prairie Farmer protective service for live stock and poultry. Field men from Prairie Farmer are equipped with a device similar to the principle of check protectors only that the form of protector used punches a letter and number in a cow's ear and on the wings of poultry. Each farmer is assigned a certain letter and number for his markings and this is recorded in the courts. By this means if cattle or poultry are stolen from a protected farm it can easily be traced. The protecting device can also be used by the farmer as a check protector. This is not all the service offers, for in addition each farmer who signs up is given a specially treated metal sign showing that his farm is protected.

CLUB WOMEN ENJOY MORGAN PARK MEETING

Club members of the Third District of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs to the number of 451, including members of the Orland Park and Tinley Park Women's clubs journeyed Monday to Morgan Park where the Morgan Park Club was hostess to the district. The meeting was held in the beautiful Baptist church which was an ideal place for such a gathering. Mrs. Arthur Swett, president of the district, presided and after the customary address of welcome, response and pledge of allegiance to the flag, the first speaker, Dr. Ralph K. Packard, president elect of the Illinois State Medical Society, under the direction of the Public Health department, was introduced. His subject was "Exploitation of Health." He said he was more interested in the prevention of disease rather than the cure.

He cited three classes who are engaged in the exploitation of health, namely doctors, laymen and the cults.

Of the first named he told how the Medical Society requires their o. k. on all new medicines brought out by their members and others of which over 4000 kinds of medicines are not accepted. The Society works to the undoing of unethical doctors who practice for money alone, by various schemes and appliances used to pretend to cure. Dr. Brinkley of Kansas was cited as one who was put out of business by the society.

The medicine man, in traveling shows etc., who sell medicine etc., which are supposed to cure anything from tuberculosis to corns, was exposed.

Dr. Packard told of his personal visits into places where cults have resorts to cure, and of a large number which were in one place when he was there, not one was cured in their own admission to him.

The press came in for a scoring, in the practices of carrying ads of quack doctors and others. Many papers, under the efforts of the society, do not carry unsound medical ads anymore.

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephriam Garden's apartment," advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and counseling that "Equanimity is essential." Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son, Floyd and his puny cousin, Woodie Swift, are addicted to horse-racing. Vance says that "Equanimity" is a horse running next day in the Rivermont handicap. Vance is convinced that the message was sent by Dr. Siefert, the Gardens' family physician. He arranges to have lunch next day at the Gardens' penthouse. Vance is greeted by Floyd Garden and meets Lowe Hammie, an elderly follower of horse racing. Floyd expresses concern over Swift's queer actions.

At this moment we heard the sound of light footsteps coming up the hall, and in the archway, which constituted the entrance from the hall into the drawing-room, appeared a slight, pallid young man of perhaps thirty, his head drawn into his slightly hunched shoulders, and a melancholy, resentful look on his sensitive, sorrow face. Thick-lensed pince-nez glasses emphasized the impression he gave of physical weakness.

Garden waved his hand cheerily to the newcomer.

"Greetings, Woody. Just in time for a spot before lunch. You know Vance, the eminent sleuth; and this is Mr. Van Dine, his patient and retiring chronicler."

Woodie Swift acknowledged our presence in a strained but pleasant manner, and listlessly shook hands with his cousin. Then he picked up a bottle of Bourbon and poured himself a double portion, which he drank at one gulp.

"Good Heavens!" Garden exclaimed good-humoredly. "How you have changed, Woody! . . . Who's the lady now?"

The muscles of Swift's face twitched.

"Oh, pipe down, Floyd," he pleaded irritably.

Garden shrugged indifferently. "Sorry. What's worrying you today besides Equanimity?"

"That's enough worry for one day," Swift managed a sheepish grin; then he added aggressively: "I can't possibly lose." And he poured himself another drink. "How's Aunt Martha?"

Garden narrowed his eyes.

"She's pretty fair. Nervous as the devil this morning, and smoking one cigarette after another. But she's sitting up. She'll probably be in later to take a crack or two at the prancing steeds . . ."

At this point Lowe Hammie arrived. He was a heavy-set, short man of fifty or thereabouts. He was wearing a black-and-white checked suit, a gray shirt, a brilliant green four-in-hand, a chocolate-colored waistcoat with leather buttons, and tan blucher shoes the soles of which were inordinately thick.

"The Marster of 'Ounds, b'Gad!" Garden greeted him jovially. "Here's your scotch-and-soda; and here also are Mr. Philo Vance and Mr. Van Dine."

"Delighted—delighted!" Hammie exclaimed heartily, coming forward.

In a few minutes the butler announced lunch. The conversation was almost entirely devoted to horses, the history of racing, the Grand National, and the possibilities of the various entrants in the afternoon's Rivermont Handicap.

Vance contented himself mainly with listening and studying the others at the table.

We were nearing the end of the luncheon when a tall, well-built and apparently vigorous woman, who looked no more than forty (though I later learned that she was well past fifty), entered the room. She wore a tailored suit, a silver-fox scarf and a black felt toque.

"Why, mater!" exclaimed Garden. "I thought you were an invalid. Why this spurt of health and energy?"

He then presented me to his mother: both Vance and Hammie had met her on previous occasions. "I'm tired of being kept in bed," she told her son querulously, after nodding graciously to the others. "Now you boys sit right down—I'm going shopping, and just dropped in to see if everything was going all right . . . I think I'll have a creme de menthe frappe while I'm here."

The butler drew up a chair for her beside Swift, and went to the pantry. Mrs. Garden put her hand lightly on her nephew's arm.

"How goes it with you, Woody?" she asked in a spirit of camaraderie. Without waiting for his answer, she turned to Garden again. "Floyd, I want you to place a bet for me on the big race today, in case I'm not back in time."

"Name your poison," smiled Garden.

"I'm playing Grand Score to win and place—the usual hundred."

"Right - o, mater." Garden glanced sardonically at his cousin. "Less intelligent bets have been made in these diggins full many a time and oft . . . Sure you don't want Equanimity, mater?"

"Odds are too unfavorable," returned Mrs. Garden, with a canny smile.

"He's quoted in the over-night line at five to two."

"He won't stay there." There was authority and assurance in the woman's tone and manner. "And I'll get eight or ten to one on Grand Score."

"Right you are," grinned Garden. "You're on the dog for a century win and place."

The butler brought the creme de menthe, and Mrs. Garden sipped it and stood up.

"And now I'm going," she announced pleasantly. She patted her nephew on the shoulder. "Take care of yourself, Woody . . . Good afternoon, gentlemen." And she went from the room with a firm masculine stride.

"Sneed," Garden ordered, "fix the set-up as usual."

I glanced at the electric clock on the mantel: It was exactly ten minutes after one.

"Fixing the set-up" was a comparatively simple procedure, but a more or less mysterious operation for anyone unfamiliar with the purpose it was to serve. From a small closet in the hall Sneed first wheeled out a sturdy wooden stand about two feet square. On this he placed a telephone connected to a loud speaker which resembled a midge radio set. As I learned later, it was a specially constructed amplifier to enable every one in the room to hear distinctly whatever came over the telephone.

On one side of the amplifier was attached a black metal switch box with a two-way key. In its upright position this key would cut off the voice at the other end of the line without interfering with the connection; and throwing the key forward would bring the voice on again.

The butler then brought in a well-built folding card-table and opened it beside the stand. On this table he placed another telephone of the conventional French, or hand, type. This telephone, which was gray, was plugged into an additional jack in the baseboard. The gray telephone was not connected with the one equipped with the amplifier, but was on an independent line.

When the two instruments and the amplifier had been stationed and tested, Sneed brought in four more card-tables and placed them about the drawing-room. At each table he opened up two folding chairs. Then, from a small drawer in the stand, he took out a long manila envelope which had evidently come through the mail, and, slitting the top, drew forth a number of large printed sheets approximately nine by sixteen inches. There were 15 of these sheets—called "cards" in racing parlance—and after sorting them he spread out three on each of the card-tables.

When the butler had gone Garden lifted the receiver from the hook of the telephone and dialed a number. After a pause he spoke into the transmitter:

"Hello, Lex. B-2-9-8. Waiting for the dope." And, laying the receiver down on the stand, he threw the switch key forward.

A clear-cut, staccato voice came through the amplifier: "O. K., B-2-9-8." Then there was a click, followed by several minutes of silence. Finally the same voice began speaking: "Everybody get ready. The exact time now is one-thirty and a quarter.—Three tracks today. The order will be Rivermont, Texas, and Cold Springs. Just as you have them on the cards. Here we go, Rivermont: weather clear and track fast. Clear and fast. First post, 2:30. And now down the line—"

Garden leaned over and threw the amplifier switch up, and there was silence in the room. He turned to his cousin. "Why don't you take Vance and Mr. Van Dine upstairs, and show them around the garden? . . . They might," he added with good-natured sarcasm, "be interested in your lonely retreat on the roof, where you listen in to your fate.

Sneed has probably got it arranged for you."

Swift rose with alacrity.

"Damned glad of the chance," he returned surlily. "Your manner today rather annoys me, Floyd." And he led the way down the hall and up the stairs to the roof-garden, Vance and I following.

The stairway was narrow and semicircular, and led upward from the hallway near the front entrance. In glancing back up the hall, toward the drawing-room, I noticed that no section of that room was visible from the stair end of the hall. I made this mental note idly at the time, but I mention it here because the fact played a very definite part in the tragic events which were to follow.

At the head of this narrow stairway we turned left into a corridor, barely four feet wide, at the end of which was a door leading into a large room—the only room on the roof. This spacious and beautifully appointed study, with high windows, on all four sides, was used by Professor Garden, Swift informed us, as a library and private experimental laboratory. Near the door to this room, on the left wall of the corridor, was another door, of calamine, which, I learned later, led into a small storeroom built to hold the professor's valuable papers and data.

Half-way down the corridor, on the right, was another large calamine weather door which led out to the roof. This door had been propped open, for the sun was bright and the day mild. Swift preceded us into one of the loveliest skyscraper gardens I have ever seen.

We walked leisurely about the garden, smoking. Swift was a difficult man to talk to, and as the minutes went by he became more and more distraught. After a while he glanced apprehensively at his wrist-watch.

"We'd better be going down," he said. "They'll be coming out for the first race before long."

Vance gave him an appraising look and rose.

"What about that sanctum sanctorum of yours which your cousin mentioned?" he asked lightly.

"Oh, that . . ." Swift forced an embarrassed smile. "It's that red chair over there against the wall, next to the small table . . . But I don't see why Floyd should spoof about it. The crowd downstairs always rags me when I lose, and it irritates me. I'd much rather be alone when I get the results."

"Quite understandable," nodded Vance with sympathy.

"You see," the man went on rather pathetically, "I frankly play the ponies for the money—the others downstairs can afford to take heavy losses, but I happen to need the cash just now."

Vance had stepped over to the little table on which stood a desk telephone which had, instead of the ordinary receiver, what is known as a head receiver—that is, a flat disk ear-phone attached to a curved metal band to go over the head.

"Your retreat is well equipped," commented Vance.

"Oh, yes. This is an extension of the news-service phone downstairs; and there's also a plug-in for a radio, and another for an electric plate."

He took the ear-phone from the hook and, adjusting the band over his head, listened for a moment.

"Nothing new yet at Rivermont," he mumbled. He removed the ear-phone with nervous impatience and tossed it to the table. "Anyway we'd better get down." And he walked toward the door by which we had come out in the garden.

When we reached the drawing-room we found two newcomers—a man and a woman—seated at one of the tables, poring over the racing cards and making notations. Vance and I were casually introduced to them by Garden.

The man was Cecil Kroon, about thirty-five, immaculately attired and sleek, with smooth, regular features and a very narrow waxed mustache. He was quite blond, and his eyes were a cold steely blue. The woman, whose name was Madge Weatherby; was about the same age as Kroon, tall and slender, and with a marked tendency toward theatricalism in both her attire and her make-up. Her cheeks were heavily rouged and her lips crimson. Her eyelids were shaded with green, and her eyebrows had been plucked and replaced with fine penciled lines.

Garden looked up and motioned to us—he was holding the receiver of the black telephone to his ear. Kroon went to the small bar and mixed two drinks which he took back to his table, setting one down before Miss Weatherby.

"I say, Floyd," he called out to Garden, "Zalia coming today?"

"Absolutely," Garden told him. "She was all stirred up when she phoned this morning. Full of sure things."

"Well, what about it?" came a vivacious feminine voice from down the hall; and the next moment a swaggering, pretty girl was standing in the archway, her hands on her muscular boyish hips. "I've concluded I can't pick any winners myself, so why not let the other guy pick 'em for me? . . . Hello, everybody," she threw in parenthetically. . . . "But Floyd, old thing. I really have a humdinger in the first at Rivermont today. This didn't come from a stable-boy, either. It came from one of the stewards—a friend of dad's. And am going to smear that hay-burner!"

GOLDEN TEXT—The same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. John 5:36.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Feeding Hungry People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Boy Who Gave Away His Lunch.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Did Christ Work Miracles? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Significance of Christ's Miracles.

The world is looking for supermen, those who can work "miracles," and thus afford an easy solution for the problems of the home and of the nation. Men are ready to marvel at and follow in almost abject submission those who promise riches without labor, food without toil, short cuts to comfort and satisfaction. Often they are content if they only have something over which they may exclaim "Wonderful!" whether it be useful or not.

The miracles of God, through his servants and the Lord Jesus Christ, are not mere marvels or wonders. They are not for the advancement of the cause of any man or for personal glory. They are the mighty signs of an omnipotent God wrought for the good of men, for their spiritual enlightenment and as a testimony to the one true God.

The two miracles of our lesson present Jesus Christ as a Lord of mercy and grace—ready to meet the needs of men. Deep and real was his compassion as his heart yearned over needy humanity.

It is suggested that in the study and teaching of this lesson we vary our plan somewhat and present seven seed thoughts found in the two portions assigned. It is also urged that the context in both chapters be read with care.

I. We Are Impotent Folk (John 5:2).

The words well describe not only those who lay helpless about the pool of Bethesda but they fit us as well. Oh, yes, we are strong, capable, fearless, but only until we meet some great elemental problem. Then we see that we are indeed "a great multitude of impotent folk." The gently falling snow stopped the undefeated Napoleon. The silent fog can paralyze a nation. Death, sickness—who can stay their hand?

II. Despair Spells Defeat (v. 7).

Long familiarity with his weakness had bred in the man with the infirmity a sense of despair. Such an attitude invites defeat. It is unbecoming to a Christian. Let us not forget in the darkest hour to "keep looking up."

III. God Answers the Weakest Faith (v. 8).

Jesus evidently saw in the man's despairing reply a spark of faith. He who believes honors the name of God. We may need to cry "I believe, help thou mine unbelief," but if we believe God will gloriously meet even our faltering faith.

IV. God's Command Empowers (vv. 8, 9).

Jesus told the man to "Rise—and walk"—the very thing he could not do for his thirty-eight years of life. But when the Son of God speaks to us he gives the power to respond to his command.

V. Works Follow Faith (v. 9).

The man arose, took up his bed, and walked. Man's faith in God and God's response to faith lead to man's action on God's command. Too many are they in the church today who have never stood up and walked for God.

VI. Look to God, Not at Your Resources (John 6:9).

Humanlike, the disciples counted their money and found it was not enough to supply food for a multitude. And then there was a boy, but he had only five barley crackers and two little fish. It almost sounds like a church-board deciding to close the cross-roads church and let the Devil have the boys and girls, because it costs too much to keep up the work. God help us to trust and go on for him. "Little is much when God is in it."

VII. Followers for Bread Not Wanted (v. 15).

Those who follow Christ because of business advantage and social prestige know nothing of what it means to be a Christian. He is not a bread-making king; he is the bread of life.

Essence of Prayer

Prayer in its essence is not so much the expression of our desire for things at all as of our desire for God Himself.

Discourtesy

Discourtesy occasions not merely suffering, but sin; and Christian courtesy is a "means of grace" to all who have the happiness to receive it.—R. W. Dale.

First Hot-Air Balloon

The first hot-air balloon was made by Joseph Montgolfier, who reasoned that if hot air would go up a chimney it might push up a balloon. With a sheep, a duck and a rooster on board, his paper balloon made its first ascension at Paris in 1783. A few months later two men, Pilatre de Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes, made a trip.

Discovery of hydrogen as a lifting gas made the hot-air balloon obsolete before it got a real trial.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt right into the delicate tissues, making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—night and morning. Murine may be depended on to relieve eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing 7 active ingredients of known value in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

Women's Club District Meeting In Morgan Park

A most interesting part of the program was when H. J. Geister, a blind lawyer in Chicago with his sight-seeing dog, a beautiful, highly intelligent animal whose name was Neubia. This dog led Mr. Geister from his office in down town Chicago thru the heavy traffic of State street to the church in Morgan Park and up to the platform. He is his constant guide. The dog obeys his master's command to turn right or left, forward or back; he stops at all curbs to enable his master to get for the step up or down. He stops at all doors so the direction of the revolving door can be found; he guides thru places where low over hanging objects are. Dogs cannot tell color, therefore the red or green traffic lights mean nothing to him when crossing a crowded street so he is guided by the traffic alone and no one should interfere with a dog when he is leading a blind person.

This was the first of such kind of dogs in Chicago and there are but 250 such dogs in the United States. The first sight-seeing dog institutes were founded in this country in 1929 and there are but two one in Nashville, Tenn., the other at Morris, N. J. It takes four years to train a man to be a trainer and there are two expert dog trainers in the United States and 13,000 blind people. It takes three months to train eight dogs at a cost of $900 per dog, whose average life is 8 or 9 years. The dogs are trained from the age of 14 months. When a blind person wants such a dog he must live with the trainer and dog for 4 months in order for them to understand each other.

The next speaker was the forceful, convincing Wm. P. Wilkerson, an Indian, and president of the Indian Council Fire in Chicago, who spoke on the problems of the Indian Youth. He had with him Whirling Thunder, a fine Indian who is instructor of Indian handicraft in the Chicago Park System.

The afternoon session opened with community singing following which Miss Ruby K. Badger, supt., Park Ridge School for Girls was introduced and told of her work.

The last speaker was Mrs. Arthur B. Williams, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

She said the good life is to live on the highest level so far as environment, education and culture is concerned; that democracy cannot be divorced from education; that in 1642 the first law was passed in this country which decreed that every 50 houses should have a public school.

Mrs. Williams advocated classes in home making, which would consist of housekeeping, parenthood and rights of citizenship. She said people should see to it that they elect as members of Boards of Education, those who are particularly capable of the position. Too often, it was pointed out, this kind of a position is filled by those of little education and political schemers.

She said the greatest evil to democracy is the evil of ignorance, indifference and complacency.

Workers Protest Strikes In General Motors Plants

More than 9,000 men, virtually the entire personnel of the Chevrolet Gear and Axle Division of General Motors Corporation, staged a demonstration in Detroit last week against the strikes which have shut down General Motors plants and caused enforced idleness to more than 135,000 workers.

The Detroit demonstration occurred at the main plant of Chevrolet's four units on Holbrook avenue at St. Aubin.

There has been no strike in these Detroit units of Chevrolet. But the units, devoted to the manufacture of gears, axles, steel wheels and knee action mechanism, are key suppliers of these automotive parts to ten assembly plants, and the sit down strikes in other plants have stopped all operations here.

It is estimated that more than 90 per cent of the men in the plants are eager to return to their jobs.

These employees assembled last week to receive their pay checks, their last pay until the resumption of operations.

While waiting for the paymaster's staff, the men held a mass meeting in the four cafeterias of the Division and appointed a committee to express their opposition to the strikers and those causing their enforced idleness.

Appointing an employees' committee, headed by Arthur Evans and George Gilbert, workers in the plant, the groups voted to publicize their opposition to the strike through personal telegrams to Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan and President Roosevelt. After the meetings, the four groups assembled in front of the main plant for a mass demonstration of protest under banners with the legends: "We don't want a strike", "We want our jobs back", "We object to minority rule", and "No labor dictators for us."

Since this demonstration in Detroit, a conference has taken place between officials of General Motors Corporation and representatives of the striking faction. The meeting was called by the Governor and at its conclusion, statements were issued to the effect that negotiations for an early resumption of production would take place, starting at once.

HOMEMAKERS' INSTITUTE

The American Home department of the Third Congressional District, of the Illinois Federation of Women's Club will conduct a Homemakers' Institute under the directions of Mrs. Harold F. Wood, chairman on Wednesday February 3, at the Beverly Hills Woman's Club, Longwood Drive at 96th street.

The Institute will open at 10:15 a. m. recessing at 12:30 for luncheon and resuming at 1:30, with adjournment at 3:15.

There will be noted speakers on Finance, Family Relations, Safety in the Home and Consumers' Problems. A famous mezzo-soprano of the Chicago City Opera Company will sing at the afternoon session.

All of the clubs of the district will have special exhibits to be judged for ribbons.

Driving Hints

Courtesy in driving seems to be unfortunately, one of the things neglected in the education of many drivers.

A prime example of discourtesy, the Chicago Motor Club points out, is the action of the driver who slams through puddles of water, splashing the pedestrians who are unfortunate enough to be within range. How many dresses and suits have had to be sent to the cleaners as a result nobody knows. There's no necessity for the driver's action. If space permits, he can swing around the puddles; if it doesn't, he can slacken speed, so that his wheels won't hit the puddles with great force, thereby cutting down the field of the spray.

Remember the next time you are driving in wet weather that it's only your possession of a car that keeps you from being the one who gets splashed and govern yourself accordingly.

MOKENA

Otto Bartels, cashier of the Mokena State Bank who has been ill with the flu for the past ten days, is able to be out again and back at his bank duties.

Morry Larson is able to be about again following a siege of the flu.

Jacob Geistlinger, father of Mrs. Fred Steinhausen of Mokena, died on Tuesday in the St. Joseph hospital in Joliet following a lingering illness.

The card and bunco party held by the Mokena Band Association parents in the school auditorium Tuesday night was well attended.

The Mokena Volunteer Fire Department held a big feed at the Mokena Oil Company plant last Thursday night. A 16 pound ham baked in a rye covering was the prized delicacy and this together with other eats and drinks made up a real feast.

Four new firemen were initiated. They are: Ben Tewes, Charles Burkhardt, Willard Marti and Morry Larson.

On Monday night the Mokena M. W. A. Camp members entertained their wives at an oyster supper at the St. Mary hall. Over 100 guests were present. All enjoyed a delightful time.

Wesley Cappel is recuperating nicely from his recent operation.

The flooded field on the Fred Yunker farm which has been frozen solid, has been used for skating by the young folks of the community.

Mrs. Harry Schoen recently returned from a visit with relatives in Eagan, South Dakota and reports deep snow and very cold weather.

MUCK-RAKING JOURNALISM!

IMAGINE it... the staid John Quincy Adams being interviewed as he bathed in the Potomac river — and with a woman as the inquiring reporter!

Anne Royal was her name, and she was America's first muck-raking journalist... the pioneer among shady newspaper writers who did her best to "dig up the dirt" about early governmental officials.

Here was an "Uncommon American," one of that fascinating species now discussed in a series of feature articles by a great modern writer — Elmo Scott Watson. Short, attention-compelling and revealing, these articles will hold your attention to the end. Don't miss

Around the Town
New Lenox

Did you know that E. N. has a new gal? He must go for Manhattan girls—this is the third now, and he claims this was love at first sight. You'd think so too if you could hear her pleading, "Please Eddy!"

Diamond and Jimmie made up—surely it'll be wedding bells now. He's sure been spending his money on postage stamps anyway.

Looks as though "Ike" is pretty lonesome now without his gal. Won't be long and she'll be back though. Wonder if W.N. knows that E.K. from over yonder, has a crush on him. Wonder how he'll take it when he hears that S. is going pretty steady with D. M.

L. R. claims she sure had a good time "Logging" Saturday night.

Just who was H. S. trying to imitate last Sunday night at the dance in Manhattan?

We hear A.W. had a "happy landing" Saturday night when A. R. took off her shoes and stockings and pushed her off the chair onto floor. What a battle that must have been.

A reader would like to ask D. R. if he's still "bouncing" after eating such a big dinner Sunday.

Someone tells us that V. K. and O. D. had a good time "Loggin" Sunday night. Everybody must have gone loggin' Sunday night.

"Ma" O'D. has made a habit of taking in all stray cats. So if you have any cats you want to get rid of, take them to "Ma."

People are wondering if M. P. got her tobacco home to her hubby Friday night.

Who's the gal that came to town to visit W. S. Saturday afternoon.

Who are the two New Lenox gals that almost got into a hair-pulling contest one night last week? When two gals get tuff at each other they can really fight.

Hello America

Radio Hour

Plans now being completed for the sixth annual "Hello America!" radio hour to be sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States indicate that the 1937 nationwide broadcast will be the most extensive and impressive ever held. A full hour's program will be presented, originating in New York City, at 11:30 p. m. to 12:30 a. m. (Eastern Standard Time) Monday, February 15th. More than 3,500 local units of the V. F. W. in every state are making plans for their individual participation in the "Hello America!" program.

The outstanding feature of the sixth annual "Hello America!" program will be the radio initiation of a nationwide class of recruits by Commander in Chief Bernard W. Kearney, speaking from New York. In thousands of cities and towns throughout the country, from coast to coast, and from Mexico to the Canadian border, groups of this nation's former fighting men of every war and armed expedition since 1898, will assemble to take the oath of membership into the organization which is composed exclusively of overseas veterans.

In anticipation of the February 15 program, intensive membership campaigns now are being conducted by virtually every local and state Department unit in the V. F. W. Preliminary reports indicate that approximately 30,000 veterans will be obligated into the V. F. W. during the radio ceremony.

Other features of the program will include an address by Mrs. Gladys Mooney, Detroit, Mich., National President of the V. F. W. Ladies' Auxiliary. Special music and entertainment also are being planned in accordance with the custom of making the program one of outstanding interest to the radio public as a whole.

Loss of Job

Good Luck

Ted O'Loughlin, who draws the comic strip, "Finney of the Force," which readers of this paper enjoy so much every week, might be a railroad man today instead of the widely known artist that he is, had it not been for the fact that when he was holding down a job as a way-bill clerk in the freight department of the Pennsylvania railroad in Philadelphia, his boss' likeness in grotesque caricature made its appearance on too many way bills. In a year the building artist found his career as a railroad man cut short and he was precipitated into the work for which his later success proved he was particularly fitted.

Now only thirty years of age, Mr. O'Loughlin had quite an extensive experience in various lines of endeavor even before his brief tenure of service with the Pennsylvania railroad.

TED O'LOUGHLIN

Christened "Edward A. J.", his nickname was conferred by a stuttering aunt who could say "Ed."

Like many other successful men, he began his business career as a newsboy. Later, during the summer vacations, he served successively as office boy, a printer's devil and a jack-of-all trades. The summer of 1918 found him working in a clothing mill, but this did not last long, for by August of the same year he was in the "world's greatest wartime shipyard"—Hog Island—a passer-boy, being the medium by which red-hot rivets were passed from the heater to the holder-on.

At the death of his father in 1919, the future artist left high school and became the "breadwinner" of the family as a telegraph messenger boy. From this he advanced to the railroad job from which he was to be soon separated because of the itch to caricature which he could not suppress.

Six months after he was "bumped" in the language of railroad workers, he embarked upon his life work as a newspaper man and artist. He was employed at different times on most of the dailies of Philadelphia, and Camden, N. J., making layouts, retouching and doing sports cartoons. From this it was but a step to the comic strip field and he has made a name for himself among the younger cartoonists of the country through his portrayal of "Finney of the Force."

With these little sidelights on the career of the man who gives you the enjoyable weekly visits from "Finney" you will be more interested than ever, we know, in watching for the further adventures of the genial officer as they appear in this paper, and in telling your friends about "Finney" and the man who draws him.

Washington
Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—If the first legislative act of the new congress is to measure its efficiency and its value as the policy making branch of our government, there is no other conclusion than that our legislative body has sunk to a new low in its history. Of course, congress should not be judged by the mess it made in rushing through a resolution barring further shipment of airplanes and engines to Spain but on every side I hear criticism of the lack of common sense used in that instance.

To recall some of the details, when congress convened there was a wild and surging wave demanding that the United States remain neutral and avoid entanglement in the Spanish crisis. Everywhere and on a million tongues was heard the cry that the United States should take no chances; it should take all of the stitches in time that are necessary to make certain that we will not get involved in a circumstance on European soil that threatens to become another 1914.

It has been and is quite evident that the people of the United States are committed to a policy of peace, a policy of neutrality. European developments have proceeded so slowly that even the merest tyro has foreseen the ultimate clash between communism and fascism about which I wrote in these columns some weeks ago. In other words, the European situation has developed after a manner that would enable preventative plans to be laid on this side of the Atlantic ocean.

But congress, in attempting to insure our neutrality, did probably the most unneutral thing it could have done. In so doing, I believe the consensus is that both house and senate demonstrated again the inability characterizing congresses of the last few years to appraise a complete picture. It yielded to what it believed to be the public demand giving thought to the future.

Let us analyze briefly what happened. The congress convened, as I have said, with an almost unanimous demand from the country for a definite and workable neutrality policy. It convened with two or three individual business units seeking to deliver shipments of airplanes and engines to the so-called loyalist troops in Spain. The exporters of these war material sensed quick action by congress that would destroy their contracts. Naturally, they put on all speed to get the planes and engines out of this country ahead of an embargo. Congress, like so many boys in a college football match, fell into the spirit of competition, a race.

Well, the answer is that Robert Cuse succeeded in getting his planes and engines on board ship and away from New York and beat in the race by twelve hours, a fact which congressional leaders knew when they enacted the resolution of embargo.

So, it appears to be almost inexcusable that men of brains should have rushed a piece of legislation on through its channels containing an entire absence of neutrality in its very language.

The resolution that was to prevent Mr. Cuse and several others from shipping airplanes and engines to Spain not only laid down the embargo which was its purpose but it laid down that embargo specifically against Spain.

Now, to those not versed in international law, it may not be immediately evident how dangerous such a precedent is. International law requires (and it is accepted everywhere among all nations) that there shall be no discrimination among nations unless those nations are declared to be belligerents. Spain has not been so declared. The war in Spain is a civil war insofar as it relates to any other nation officially. Of course, it is a well known fact that troops from communist Russia and nearly-communist France are helping the so-called loyalist government in Spain. It is equally well known that fascist troops from Nazi Germany and fascist Italy are supporting the rebel liberal General Franco in Spain. These facts would seem to make the war in Spain something more than a civil war, which, indeed, it is, but as far as the United States is officially concerned, the war in Spain remains civil strife. And yet our congress in the worst display of low grade intelligence witnessed in a long time, specifically places Spain in the category of a nation at war with another nation and says in a statute that certain commodities may not be shipped to that nation.

To state this problem another way, it would have been exceedingly simple to have made the legislation apply to all nations and thereby to avoid embarrassment.

There was time after the race with Mr. Cuse was lost to have made the correction of a mistake which should never have been made in the first place. But congressional leaders were swept overboard by the big wave and as far as I am concerned have demonstrated again their lack of ability to keep their feet on the ground.

I do not know what it presages in the way of future legislation. It may be that after the excitement has died down, congress will again debate legislation and work out proper laws but the start certainly has been inauspicious.

Attention ought to be called just here to the differences that have arisen and promise to cause difficulties between the executive branch of the government and some of the legislators. Mr. Roosevelt, as President, seems to feel that he should have plenty of power to deal with problems like the Spanish situation and export of arms without consulting congress. A good many New Deal Leaders in congress feel the same way. But there are many who disagree with that idea. There is pronounced sentiment at the Capitol in favor of legislation that would definitely prohibit the exporting of arms and munitions of war but including definitions and guide lines for those in the executive branch of the government to enforce.

It is too early yet to tell what form the permanent legislation will take because of the circumstances just outlined. With the top heavy New Deal majority in congress, it would seem the better guess to predict that Mr. Roosevelt will have his way but on the other hand, until such an issue becomes clear cut one cannot tell very far in advance how the two schools of thought will solve their problem and whether the United States will be committed further to the one man control that would necessarily result from granting additional discretionary power to the President in a matter of this kind.

There seems to be no doubt anywhere that sooner or later one of the nations whose troops is participating in the Spanish civil strife will commit an overt act, an act of war. Some hot-headed individual in command of a ship or an airplane or troops guarding a border will take a pot shot that will wipe out a life or two and wipe out peace at the same time just as occurred when the comparatively insignificant Austrian Archduke was shot in 1914. There can be no question that the United States must follow an international policy under these circumstances that is most cautious.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, the famous dreaming brain trust No. 1 of the Roosevelt administration, has returned to private life—to an executive position with a molasses firm. Before he left his post as Undersecretary of Agriculture, however, the famous professor signed an order that is designed to curb lobbying by former employees of the Department in whose administration he had a hand.

The aim of this order was an obviously worthy one because it was designed to prevent former officials or employees of the Department of Agriculture from using new connections with commercial groups from obtaining information or using influence not of the best sort from a public standpoint. With that order, there can be no quarrel.

I find among astute observers in Washington, however, no serious supposition that the order would operate to deprive Dr. Tugwell himself or any other former official of high standing from access to members of the Department's staff. It just does not work out that way. It never has and it never will, despite the wholesome character of the good professor's plans.

The truth is that while such an order may make lesser officials more cautious and thus put a few obstacles in the way of petty lobbying, it is thoroughly ineffectual in preventing the use of influence or the obtaining of information from that Department or any other in the government.

The difficulty with this situation is that government offices are being used as a stepping stone to more lucrative jobs. The government does not offer ambitious and able men a security of tenure. Men who demonstrate ability in governmental positions sooner or later are offered jobs with great big salary checks attached and they would be less than human if they did not consider such proposition when they know that in the course of human events a great turnover will take place in their own department and they are swept aside by reversal of public political action.

Offers New Opportunities

THE modern woman who sews is really an enviable person. She has at her finger-tips an endless array of fashions from which to choose for her own and her daughters' wardrobes. Today's trio affords her new opportunities in several size ranges; in fact, there's something here for the mature figure, size 42, right on down to the tiny tot who just manages to fill an "age 4."

Pattern 1987—This diminutive frock is for Miss Four - To-Twelve. Its easy lines, flaring skirt, and pretty sleeves are perhaps second only to its thru-the-machine-aptness, so far as the woman who sews is concerned. But this is all too obvious to mention. Better cut this pattern twice for all 'round practical reasons. It's intriguing in taffeta—a winner in gingham and linen. It comes in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 6 requires 1 1/2 yards of 39 inch material plus 3/4 yard contrasting.

Pattern 1211—It is a smart frock like this that will turn the most immune young lady into an ardent seamstress almost overnight. And rightly so, for it's plain to see how becoming are its princess lines, how flattering the wide shoulders and slim waist, yes, and how spicy the swing skirt. A pretty and colorful motif can be had in the use of velvet for the buttons and belt. Monotone broadcloth, black or royal blue, with the collar and cuffs of white linen, is a startlingly chic material for this model. It is available in sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 2 3/4 yards of 54 inch fabric plus 3/4 yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Pattern 1210—Which would you have, Madam, an artistic smock or a glamorous house coat? This pattern allows you to make this interesting choice and it has what you'll need to make either of the models illustrated here. The house coat has become woman-kind's most desired "at home" attire; so rather than be among the minority, why not turn your talents to this princess model—you'll have it complete in a mere few hours and think of the countless days it will stand you in good stead as a really good looking wardrobe asset. It is designed in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 (in full length) requires 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material plus 3/4 yards of bias piping and 3/4 yard contrasting material for pocket.

YOU CAN THROW CARDS
IN HIS FACE
ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful cramps; when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.

A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

MORNING DISTRESS is due to acid, upset stomach. Mints wafers (the original) quickly relieve acid stomach and give necessary elimination. Each wafer equals 4 teaspoonfuls of milk of magnesia. 20c, 35c & 60c.

Pennsylvania Bossy and Her Triplets

The proud mother, a Holstein cow, owned by Nathan Folk, farmer of Stony Creek Mills, near Reading, Pa., as shown with her three babies. Although triple birth to a cow is distinctly rare, all three calves are normal.

THE RATS START A FIRE

RATS are born thieves. They not only steal food, but they carry off many other things, things for which they really have no use at all. Now it happened that one of the young rats in the farmhouse found some matches and took them to his nest under the floor of the shed. There, having nothing else to do, he nibbled at them to see what the queer stuff on the ends of them might be. His sharp teeth caused one of them to light, and of course that instantly lighted all the rest of them. With a squeak of fright the rat ran away, for like all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows a rat fears the Red Terror, which we call fire, more than anything else.

Now that rat's nest was made chiefly of chewed up paper and old rags. Nothing could have been better for the Red Terror. It blazed instantly. The floor just above was of very, very dry wood, for the boards of that floor had been there many years. In no time at all that shed was afire.

All the rats under the floor fled in terror into the house. Smoke began to pour out of the open door of the shed. The farmer at work in the barnyard saw it and ran as fast as he could to try to put the fire out. For a while the farmer and his wife had a hard fight with the Red Terror. They pumped water as fast as ever they could and carried it in pails to throw on the fire. At first it looked as if the Red Terror would be too much for them and their house would be burned up, but after a while the water was too much for the Red Terror and drowned it out.

"Whew!" exclaimed the farmer as he and his wife sat down to rest for a moment. "That was a narrow escape. How under the sun could that fire have started?"

"I haven't the least idea," replied his wife. "I was upstairs at the time. There wasn't a thing in that shed that could have started it. Do you suppose anybody could have set it?"

The farmer shook his head. "No," said he, "that fire started under the floor." Then a sudden thought came to him. "I know how it started!" he cried angrily. "It was those pesky rats! It was those pesky rats as sure as I live. They must have found some matches somewhere and taken them to a nest under the floor. Then while they were nibbling at them they set one going. We've got to get rid of those rats or we won't have a house left over our heads. I don't know how we're going to do it, but we've got to get rid of those rats!"

FEEDING THE FAMILY

THIS seems to be the principal work of at least twenty million housewives, but feeding the family on the proper food is not a light job to be undertaken with no thought.

Food is not necessarily nutritious in proportion to its cost. The high-priced foods appeal to the eye and imagination, so they seem most desirable.

Going marketing is a wonderful education as well as a great developer of will power, or resistance to temptation, for it takes real self-denial to pass by the crisp and green cucumber or the box of strawberries, when the price is beyond the purse.

The mother of a family should, of all people, understand food values, for she is in a position to build up or tear down bodies and ruin digestions. "Bad habits ruin life as do weak bones the body."

The protein foods such as meat, eggs, fish, cheese and milk are the most expensive and complex. Carbohydrates are the starches and sugars; potatoes, rice, macaroni are our principal source of starch and the sugars we get from various sources — honey — from fruits and such vegetables as beets.

An excess of meat is very bad for it clogs the system and causes self-poisoning.

Brain workers and the young as well as aged need easily digested foods. Active muscle workers need coarse foods, which are better for their needs; however, all need roughage to give bulk and increase the intestinal activity.

The growing child needs milk, butter, eggs, green vegetables and fruits to supply all the food principles and the vitamins which promote growth.

The diet should be varied as well

ONE OF THOSE DAYS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONE of those days we just recall The heavy labor of it all, Behold our task with downcast eyes We once uplifted to the prize. One of those days we look too near The task to either see or hear The beauty of it—darkly gaze And say, "It's just one of those days."

One of those days the things unkind Come quickest to the weary mind, Forgotten all the joy we met, Remembered all we should forget. One of those days we see the past As something good that could not last.

The future something that delays Too long, and say, "One of those days."

One of those days. We know not why A cloud will visit any sky, But this we know, that not a one Has ever overcome the sun. One of these days we yet shall learn If nights descend that dawn return, And with that thought our souls so raise

We never know "one of those days."

Will controlled by Logic

AS YOU progress in your understanding of the revelations of the hand, you will become more and more impressed with how well the builder of our destinies has given us each a preponderance of those qualities required to offset what otherwise might be a disastrous temperamental deficiency.

Thumb as Index of Logic vs. Will
The first two joints of the thumb, as you have learned, denote the balancing qualities of will and logic. One often is found to offset completely an almost hopeless deficiency in the other. For example, you may find a short, flexible nail joint denoting impulsiveness, extravagance and other undesirable reactions to environment quite neutralized by the greater-than-average length of the middle joint.

Or the reverse may be shown, in which case a naturally self-depreciating tendency to let things go because of mental laziness is stung to action and kept in working order by a stubborn will which refuses to submit to a temperamental defect.

son, but the true reasons are always in the subconscious mind—in the instincts — says Dr. Donald Laird in his valuable book "What Makes People Buy." Clothing and personal adornments are sold on the instinct to be admired and to attract attention; insurance on the instinctive fear of death; travel tours on the instinctive craving for romance; and automobiles on the instinct to show power and exhibit it through possessions. Everything we buy has an instinctive basis for its appeal, and most of us never realize this. An intelligent salesman studies these instincts and makes use of them.

Whistling Wildcat Is His House Pet

Negrito, reported to be the meanest house pet, rests partly on the chair and partly on the shoulder of his master, Harlan Major, of Amityville, N. Y., to pose for this photograph. Mr. Major purchased the animal, which is a member of the jaguar family, in Ecuador. It whistles instead of meowing and, although quite ferocious, has a strong affection for its master.

Sore Throat Pains DUE TO COLDS Eased Instantly

2. GARGLE thoroughly — throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat.

1. Crush and stir 3 Bayer Aspirin tablets in ½ glass of water.

3. Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Just Gargle This Way with Bayer Aspirin

Here is the most amazing way to ease the pains of rawness of sore throat resulting from a cold we know you have ever tried.

Crush and dissolve three genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases almost instantly; rawness is relieved.

Countless thousands now use this way to ease sore throat. Your doctor, we are sure, will approve it. And you will say it is marvelous. Get the real BAYER ASPIRIN at your druggist's by asking for it by its full name — not by the name "aspirin" alone.
